HOW THE NETWORKS WAGE WAR FOR BREAKFAST-TIME VIEWERS

It's an all-out fight for morning supremacy, carried on with surprising belligerence

By Ron Powers

Oh, it's a fierce and bloody little engagement going on up here in the sunrise zone, this second front of the network wars . . . NBC wheeling up convoys of chrysanthemums for the beleaguered Today-show set . . . ABC pouring it on, its big Good Morning America guns going *Bom*beck, *Bom*beck, *Bom*beck . . . the CBS Morning show, outmanned, sniping away with hard news and key issues of the day . . . all three shows routing senators, authors and celebrities out of bed in the predawn hours in a never-ending struggle for interview supremacy.

There is no way to avoid it: CBS, NBC and ABC are waging a showdown battle for the hearts, minds and breakfasts of the American people. Morning network-show viewers who are lulled by all those "friendly" coffee mugs, David Hartman's "warm" blazer lapels, or Gene Shalit's giggle might be shocked to hear this. If so, they should contemplate the warlike rhetoric of the behind-the-scenes generals. To wit:

☐ George Merlis, executive producer of ABC's Good Morning America, discussing his NBC arch-rival: "The Today show might as well build a bonfire with the money they spend on the Phil Donahue segment. . . . It looks like they're trying to build a personality cult around Tom Brokaw. . . . They're awfully close to making it The Tom Brokaw Show. . . . I don't think Tom Brokaw knows how to do an interview."

☐ William Small, NBC's new president for news, late of CBS: "Our decision to have Tom begin reading the news is a good way to remind viewers that we have legitimate news people, not actors or whatever. . . . The last time I watched Good Morning America was when it was AM America. I heard Sandy Hill [David Hartman's co-host] was leaving. I didn't even know she was on."

☐ Robert (Shad) Northshield, producer of the CBS Morning show (and a former Today-show executive himself): "The Today show is in the process of determining what it is, and what it is is in trouble. . . . It really got in trouble when it looked over its shoulder and saw Good Morning America and decided to compete. . . . Neither of those shows worries about us, they just worry the hell out of each other. They're not news programs. We are."

Strong stuff, considering that network commanders usually speak of their competitors with all the ritual deference and restraint of samurai warriors. Oddly, the open candor of this morning-show belligerence can't be explained by the dollar-worth of the programs involved. Good Morning America, after four years, costs $400,000 a week to produce and continues to operate at a deficit. The Today show turns a net profit (around $6 million a year, in the estimate of some insiders) but still the show ranks behind The Tonight Show, Saturday Night Live and the NBC Nightly News as a revenue-generator. CBS's Morning show (its hour length just half that of its competitors) continues to unfurl with patrician, low-key respectability its modest profits.

No, the intensity of competition has other, less conspicuous roots. One reason is the sudden and dramatic impact of Good Morning America: in just four years this new presence has generated a Nielsen audience share that lately has reached 25 per cent of sets in use, not far behind Today's leading share of 28. GMA pulled off this feat not so much by luring viewers away from Today as by creating a brand-new audience; that is, by attracting viewers who did not previously watch morning network television at all. Such a feat naturally inspires competitive stirrings.

But there is an even more long-term, more philosophical basis to the morning network wars. Looking ahead into the 1980s, television executives foresee an unprecedented assault on large-scale network programming. As cable outlets leap in number and as more viewers are able to program their TV screens from their own cassette li- → braries, some say the mass-scale entertainment audience of the networks will disperse. Among the few services that the networks can continue to offer as uniquely their own, these executives privately admit, will be national and world news, news features and highly produced "coping" segments—the stuff of the present morning network shows.

"I think that what you are looking at in Good Morning America," says ABC's Merlis, "is the future of American television in network form."

Consequently, the production staff of each morning show is engaged in an unending exercise of sophisticated strategy games, designed to fine-tune the format to the precise needs, tastes and whims of the morning audience. These games are monitored and analyzed, of course, by experts in opposing camps as carefully as, say, the United States monitors troop movements on the Chinese-Russian border.

In style, the three shows maintain distinct personalities, which reflect to a degree the presumed demographic features of their audiences. A rough consensus has it that CBS, with the smallest share (lately 16 per cent) attracts an elite group of middle- and upper-middle-class professionals. Today occupies the solid middle, and GMA attracts a middle-to-lower-middle-class, somewhat ethnic, mix.

The Today show is in perhaps the most volatile stage of the three. Ironically, the program that pioneered the morning-network concept 27 years ago has lately been called an emulator, adapting its format sometimes to GMA's precision-timed slickness, sometimes toward CBS's dignified journalistic cachet.

Today-show executives concede that there have been changes lately. But they scoff at the notion the program has lost its identity.

"We don't groom dogs, we don't fix pipes, we don't have a comedian," huffs executive producer Joe Bartelme. "And on the other end of the scale, I don't think we ever lost the news-information value of the show. It is very important to me that we are the first morning show to interview a newsmaker. Occasionally we'll get beat with an entertainment figure. But I don't recall in the past three months that we've been beaten in news."

Bartelme agrees that Today underwent a dramatic change of image three years ago, highlighted by the youthful Jane Pauley's arrival as replacement for Barbara Walters. At the same time the show began adding a secondary cast: consumer and health reporters, cross-country correspondents, more recently a TV critic, a business reporter.

Today was responding to changes in the viewing public at large rather than reacting to Good Morning America, insists Bartelme. "And if you look at us now, you'll find we are quite different. They have gone off in a completely different direction from us. I think it's important for us to stick to what we do best, and that's news. I don't want us to be an inane self-help show."

Correspondent Tom Brokaw believes that the Today show's present "soft" image is partly the product of distorted collective memory. "If you go back through the video tapes, as I have," Brokaw says, "you'll find lots of antics down through the years. Jack Lescoulie in a Superman suit. That sort of thing. We were never exactly the stuff of Foreign Affairs Quarterly."

It wasn't Brokaw's idea to start reading the news segments, but he likes doing it so much that he now arrives a half hour earlier, at about 5:20 A.M., to help select and write the scripts.

Some network observers interpret Brokaw's heightened journalistic posture as a victory for the new Richard Salant contingent at NBC. (Salant formerly ran the CBS news division.) They predict that Today will move to recapture some of its tarnished informational prestige. But others aren't sure. They point out that Fred Silverman, who → Cutlass Watching just got more popular. Our new sedan gives you the flair of other Cutlasses, plus the convenience of 4-doors. And, of course, it offers the good fuel economy you need today.

Remember: The boxed EPA estimates are for comparison to other cars. Your mileage and range depend on your speed, weather and trip length; your actual highway mileage and range will probably be less than the highway estimates. Driving range estimates are obtained by multiplying the EPA and highway estimates by the standard fuel tank capacity rating of 18.1 gallons. Estimates lower in California.

helped mastermind the glittery and eclectic Good Morning America for ABC, might yet intervene to steer Today along the same course. For the moment, the forces of sobriety seem in control. Watch this space.

Over at Good Morning America, meanwhile, an air of pugnacious euphoria, barely suppressed, pervades. Staffers claim that their show now has the ratings momentum to overtake Today within six months, and no one is about to tamper with the show's formula: a brassy, somewhat schizoid mix that may on a given morning feature, in rapid succession: a penetrating news interview by Steve Bell (assisted by Hartman); Cheryl Tiegs demonstrating how to tie up one's hair using chopsticks and dinner forks; Erma Bombeck with her housewifely thigh-slappers; a segment on how to insulate your attic.

The formula is hardly a chance affair. Perhaps no program in television's brief history has been constructed with as much self-conscious care as GMA; every minute is the product of exhaustive attitudinal research. The show is targeted unabashedly at women—at least the entertainment and features are. In fact, GMA is the only one of the morning shows not produced exclusively by the news division. It is a hybrid child of news and entertainment, a blending that insiders refer to, not always kindly, as "church and state," or "oil and water."

The man who embodies GMA's fusion of news and entertainment is Hartman, the actor-turned-host who participates in the "newsmaker" interview segment each morning.

"Steve Bell [GMA's news correspondent] and I have great respect for each other," Hartman says. "He's been my teacher. It hasn't been easy, bringing together two segments of the network that traditionally have never spoken to each other. But we succeed, because we define ourselves as bringing information to people to use in their lives."

"Feelings" is an important word around GMA; so are "perception," "image," "nuance" and "family." "The differences between GMA and Today are in feelings," suggests Squire Rushnell, ABC's vice president for children's and early-morning programming. "The way people feel about David Hartman and the 'family' members that are our cast. The image of David, for instance, is one of traditional values; he's perceived as a family man."

Rushnell allowed that "there is the perception that Today is more news-oriented than GMA." But, he said, "we're working to change that perception. The latest bit of research we did on perceptions indicated that people tend to perceive that GMA is now the place to turn for the news."

Such technocratic jargon is sniffed at by the CBS Morning show brain trust. "I have no idea what people 'want' to watch. What I do know is that they deserve the best journalism we can give them," says the bearded, expansive "Shad" Northshield, echoing a classic CBS policy line. "We are literate, people-oriented, significant and not necessarily featurish."

And third. The Morning show's 16 share places it well behind the two leaders, although comparisons are misleading: CBS's show is on the air only during the first hour of the 7-to-9 block occupied by its two high-powered competitors. Industry speculation has it that CBS may soon reward its ratings-poor but quality-rich show (anchored since last January by White House veteran Bob Schieffer) with an additional 30 minutes, nudging the venerable Captain Kangaroo to the 8:30 time slot.

Meanwhile, the fighting is fierce on the networks' second front, the sunrise zone. With the big guns going *Bom*beck, *Bom*beck, and Brokaw-Brokaw-Brokaw. And the occasional scream of the airborne Schieffer! (END)

There's life on this "Mars"—until the cameras roll, anyway. Then the scene will become a ghost town on the red planet for The Martian Chronicles, an upcoming six-hour NBC miniseries based on the science fiction classic by Ray Bradbury. Actually, the deserted Martian city is located at a film facility on the virtually treeless isle of Malta. But why a ghost town on Mars? In the script, Rock Hudson and Bernie Casey are members of the third U.S. expedition to Mars; their mission is to find out what happened to lost astronauts on previous expeditions. Those well-intentioned earlier explorers meant to bring greetings from Earth. Alas, they also brought Earthly viruses—including chicken-pox germs, which had the unfriendly effect of burning Martians to a crisp. Well, don't blame us homebodies. We didn't planet that way. EMS

'This voice kept talking to me...'

After an up-and-down career—and some supernatural advice—Ann Wedgeworth landed a role on 'Three's Company'

By Glenn Esterly

Ann Wedgeworth is telling a ghost story. It is, after all, Halloween.

The actress with the cascading mane of auburn hair is relating this tale while seated on a rented couch in her rented house. Despite her role in a top-rated series like Three's Company, the Broadway Tony Award-winner seems inclined to live in L.A. as if she might have to move back to New York at any moment. Listening raptly to her story are a reporter, an ABC publicist and Ann's husband, Ernest Martin, who's a stage director and acting teacher.

"This happened during a very, very, very low time in my life," Ann is saying in her down-yonder accent that lingers from a Texas upbringing. "I was doing a soap, Another World, appropriately enough, and one day while I was taking a nap in my dressing room, a voice woke me up. I looked around and couldn't see anything, but this voice kept talking to me. It filled the whole room. It was kind of a whisper; it seemed to have a hard time getting through, like it was coming from another world, yet it surrounded me." →

"Did it sound anything," the reporter inquires, "like Charlton Heston?"

"Ohhh, now you think I'm some kind of freak."

The reporter apologizes for his impertinence.

"I know it wasn't a hallucination," she insists. "At first I thought it was my late mother, but then it seemed more like a man's voice."

She goes on to speculate at considerable length as to the possible origins of the mysterious voice, neglecting to mention what it actually said. Finally, Martin interrupts: "She does this to me all the time—starts a story and then keeps you waiting for hours for the punch line. Honey, they're on the edge of their seats!"

"Oh. Well, the voice kept saying, 'Ann, Ann, you can get up!' Later that meant something to me because I had been so messed up at the time. It meant I could get through all the torment and bad things happening to me. Just three months later I met Ernie, and then we got married and had our daughter, Dianna, and not long after that my career started picking up, donchaknow? Suddenly, I was in one of the happiest periods of my life."

She lets that sink in, then adds, very softly and a bit wistfully, "I wish the voice would come back now. See, I've been going through a depression. I guess I've been a little frantic since we moved out from New York last summer. It all happened so fast. I had hoped—secretly—I just might get the role Valerie Harper got in the movie of 'Chapter Two' after I had won the Tony for best featured actress in the part. I knew Neil Simon rarely transfers people from his plays to his movies, so I really didn't expect it, but still, in the back of my mind I thought, 'Maybe, maybe, maybe . . .' Nope. Then I decided to take the offer from Three's Company—it has the ratings, and the character of Lana is so flashy. It's a career step I need to take for the exposure, but what I really want to do is movies—enormous movie roles."

She looks at the Three's Company publicist. "Isn't that a terrible thing to say? Don't get me wrong—I have fun doing Lana. It's just that I've had so many starts in my career." A long, elegant fingernail has reached out and underlined "starts" by jabbing the reporter in the kneecap. She sighs. "So many times it's looked as though my career was really going to take off, and then it goes down. [Her career may be going down again: in December, word came that Lana was being written out of Three's Company.] I didn't get the 'Chapter Two' movie role because I wasn't a 'name'."

Back where she grew up, no one could imagine her making a name in anything involving acting. The daughter of Cortus Wedgeworth (her mother died when Ann was 2), she was hide-behind-the-skirt shy, and her father, who served as superintendent of schools in small Texas towns like Snyder and Perryton, kept urging her to be more outgoing. He was taken aback, though, when she announced that she was going to be an actress, an enterprise a strict Baptist like her father regarded as borderline sinful. (Her greatest transgression up till then had been a childhood binge of smoking grapevines—"They grew in our back yard; very tasty.") After they moved to Dallas, Ann tried to join the drama club in high school, but was snubbed by a teacher who claimed she was devoid of talent.

Ann pressed on to drama school at the University of Texas, by that time fully backed by her father, who'd succumbed to her headstrongness, as well as by Esther Bearden, a family friend who'd become "my surrogate mother over the years and helped keep me sane." At college she met another gung-ho acting student, Elmore Torn, who answered to Rip, and they got married and moved to New York to break into the theater. →

Ann's first major recognition came in an off-Broadway production of "The Crucible"—her first "start." "I was really young, the notices were fantastic, and I went on to Broadway," she recalls. "I thought it was all up from there. Then I kept coming in second for parts I really wanted."

Thus was launched a teeter-totter career. In the meantime, the volatile Torn-Wedgeworth marriage broke up. "We're both very emotional. Very. It was a, um, stimulating household," she says, savoring the understatement.

While raising her daughter from that marriage, Danae (now an aspiring actress herself), Ann performed on Broadway in "Make a Million," "Blues for Mr. Charlie" and "Thieves." In between she portrayed Lahoma, a part-Cherokee Indian on the soaps Another World and Somerset.

The producers of Three's Company called last June, after she had already left the long-running "Chapter Two." "We were having trouble casting Lana," says Don Nicholl, an executive producer. "We wanted a 'mature' woman to play the new divorcee in the apartment building, someone older than Suzanne Somers and Joyce DeWitt. But she also had to be genuinely sexy or it would have looked pathetic when she constantly pursues John Ritter. We didn't find that sexiness in an older woman till someone suggested Ann. The bonus is that she's also a wonderful actress with great instincts."

The mention of "older woman" makes Ann wince. She refuses to divulge the chronology of events in her life by decade, much less by year. "It's not vanity, it's business," she says. "Producers think if you're over 35 you've had it if you're aren't already a major star, donchaknow?" Firmly, she adds, "I'm not ready to start playing grandmothers."

So there. But her age is the only thing she's guarded about. Her answers, while meandering, eventually yield dividends. What at first can be disconcerting—but ultimately beguiling—is her facility for ranging within the course of a couple of sentences from naive-little-girl breathlessness to worldly sultriness to business-only hardheadedness.

"I think she's very complex," says Nicholl. "Underneath that shy innocence you see in the beginning, there's some steel."

"All of us," observes husband Ernest, "have many levels to our personalities, but most of those levels are kept masked. Annie has fewer masks than most people. She goes with her impulses at the moment."

For her part, Ann tosses one more factor into the personality equation: "I can also be a witch."

Oh?

"Sure. I've done some real bitchy roles, like in 'Bang the Drum Slowly,' and I find them easy to play. I can get real mean when things are going badly, screaming and carrying on." She giggles over this revelation, then turns solemn: "I can get like that when I spend too much time worrying about my career, donchaknow? I've been pretty heavily into the metaphysical and spiritual things, which have helped me. Not spiritual in the sense of going to church every Sunday, but straightening out the way you feel inside so you're at peace with yourself and send out positive vibrations. I've got to get back to that more. When I was really into it, my life changed for the better, just like magic."

Magic. Speaking of that, what about her interest in the occult?

"Oh, I've been fascinated by all of that stuff since I was a kid. Ernie thinks I have ESP powers, but I haven't really cultivated them. For a while, I was reading tarot cards. Let me tell you a story about that . . ."

An interesting story, too, which would be fun to repeat. To tell the truth, though, it takes a long time to get to the punch line. END

'The Life of Molière'

The 17th-century French playwright overcame scandal and ill health to lead a life as passionate and humane as his great comedies

By Richard Wilbur

[This Wednesday, Jan. 16, PBS broadcasts the second in a five-part series on Molière. See "Sports and Specials" for time and channel.]

When the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters elected Charlie Chaplin an honorary member several years ago, the Academy's citation writers had a hard time figuring out what to call him: after all, he had been not only an actor but a scriptwriter, a director and a composer as well. The citation writers finally solved their problem by calling Chaplin a "great creator" of comic film.

We must go back three centuries, to the France of Louis XIV, to find a similarly versatile comic genius: Molière. The other prominent dramatists of the era, Corneille and Racine, were writers only; Molière, however, not only composed more than 30 pieces for the stage, but at the same time conducted three other stage careers, as manager, director and leading actor. He was, as someone has said, the most complete man of the theater who ever lived.

And considering what he crammed into his 51 years, it is a bit surprising that he found time for such things as tennis and marriage.

Jean-Baptiste Poquelin (who later adopted "Molière" as a theatrical name) was born in Paris of well-to-do bourgeois stock. His father, who held the profitable post of upholsterer to the king, sent him off for a fine classical education. But in 1643 this well-taught young man, who had been expected to succeed to his father's honorable position, broke with his class and prospects and went on the stage, adopting a profession then deplored by all sound citizens and condemned by the Church. Molière and the actress Madeleine Béjart founded the Illustre Théâtre, which played in Paris for three years, often in tennis courts briefly adapted to the purpose. The venture, unhappily, ended in bankruptcy. With his leading lady, who was also rumored to be his mistress, Molière then joined a traveling company and went on the road for 13 years, encountering provincial life in all its diversity. By the early 1650s, Molière was director of the troupe and was engaged in writing his first farcical pieces; and in 1658 he brought his company to Paris, presenting before the king two plays: Corneille's "Nicomède" and his own comedy "The Doctor in Love."

It was the second offering that pleased the court, led the king to order that the company be established in Paris, and launched Molière upon the successful and enormously productive remainder of his career. All theater in the French 17th century stood in need of patronage. Molière looked to Louis XIV and his brother for every sort of support, not least against the kind of defamation and persecution to which stage people were then vulnerable. When Molière married Armande Béjart in 1662 (he being 40 then, and twice her age), it was maliciously charged that the bride was his own daughter by his former mistress, Madeleine. That the king became godfather to Molière's first son was surely a royal reproof to that slander. And Molière turned once again to his protector when his play "Tartuffe" was obtusely accused of impiety and its author of being "a demon in the flesh." Thus sheltered by the court, the playwright created a comic oeuvre of great variety—farces, dramas, fantasies, balletic entertainments—which generally pleased his audiences.

How far are Molière's plays autobiographical? He had imperfect health, and in his later years suffered from tuberculosis; he died, indeed, after hemorrhaging on-stage during a presentation of "The Imaginary Invalid." It is perfectly reasonable to suppose some connection between Molière's illnesses and his having written so often of the follies of doctors and patients. But one must admit that the connection does not greatly enrich our experiences of the plays. Was Molière jealous of his young wife Armande, as rumor had it, and was that why he wrote "The School for Wives" during the first year of their marriage, playing in it the role of jealous old Arnolphe? Let us again grant the probability of some biographical basis; still, it may be more profitable to remember that the jealous old lover or husband is a sure-fire comic type of great antiquity.

Certain events and concerns of Molière's life are reflected in his art, but his art transforms them utterly; he is not what we would now call a "confessional" artist, and we would not read his plays to learn about his life. Nor is he an Aristophanic satirist: while reflecting contemporary realities in a generalized way, he did not make direct attacks on real persons. Nor—though many scholars have busied themselves in codifying Molière's thought—is he a philosopher or reformer; if a few personal convictions do make themselves felt, Molière's thought is on the whole the thought of comedy itself.

Comedy, and especially that sort of social comedy in which Molière was and is unequaled, posits a world that is fundamentally orderly and good and governed by "natural" laws and relationships. The central comic figures of Molière's plays are all somehow lacking in balance and in a complete humanity: they are distorted by avarice ("The Miser"), by conscious or unconscious pretensions ("The Misanthrope," "The Learned Ladies"), by the need to coerce and domineer ("Tartuffe," "The School for Wives"), or by some other radical quirk. Molière's plots serve to display these deformities in all their laughable aspects and to show how an unbalanced person may unbalance the lives of others and threaten the social fabric. At times, as in "Tartuffe," some part of that fabric is nearly destroyed, but, in accordance with the faith of comedy, what scholar Morris Bishop calls "the profound imperatives of humanity" are always affirmed at the close of Molière's plays. "I think I'm pregnant"

Now there's an easy way to determine if you're pregnant. It's Acu-Test...a safe and simple urine test for pregnancy that requires no internal examination.

In tests by hundreds of women in the privacy of their own homes, Acu-Test's pregnancy readings proved to be 97% accurate. Acu-Test is the same kind of test that's used in a doctor's office.

You can clearly see the results of your Acu-Test in just 2 hours. The appearance of a dark ring in the mirror at the base of the Acu-Test kit indicates that you're pregnant.

The sooner you know if you're pregnant, the sooner you can begin to take proper care of yourself and consult your doctor.

CBS Hot Streak Imperils ABC Lead In Season Ratings

New York—They've been polishing up the crystal at CBS, which used to be known as "the Tiffany of the networks." CBS was first in the prime-time ratings for the week ending Dec. 23, and edged closer to ABC in the season-to-date averages. ABC is still the leader; but with the season almost half over, CBS had an average of 19.0, compared with 19.6 for ABC. NBC remains mired in third place with an average rating of 17.8 after a surprisingly strong start.

CBS won Nielsen's November sweeps, becoming the first network to beat ABC for any sweeps period in four years. ABC hoped that the margin, .4 of a rating point, would not translate into equal success at the local level; and, indeed, in markets with ABC and CBS affiliates, ABC led in 77 and CBS in 65. But 146 CBS affiliates scored better than last November and only 17 were down. At ABC, however, almost the reverse was true: only 41 stations were up, 124 went down.

CBS's promotion department was so pleased that it rushed out a brochure with an upraised index finger, representing "No. 1," on the cover and the caption "Back where we belong!" On the back were the immodest words "The CBS Television Network—The Intelligent Alternative—The Adult Alternative." Top CBS executives were so shocked by the brassy flyer that they killed it. "That's not the way we do things around here," said one.

CBS's impressive showing is based largely on its six Sunday-night series, five of which are in the season's top 10. On Friday night, Dallas, now in its third season, has emerged as a monster hit and appears to have foaled a winner in its spinoff, Knots Landing. The past two years CBS faltered at the starting gate and recovered with its Christmas specials, but this season it actually made its move earlier in November and brought on new series quickly. So far the strategy has worked, with House Calls and Knots doing well and the relocated White Shadow scoring better on Tuesdays at 8 (ET) than any CBS show since Good Times in early 1976 when ABC's Happy Days became a giant success.

ABC executives have had less happy holidays. The network's prime-time average is off nearly a full point from last year and its ambitious strategy of putting its top shows at 8 P.M. has turned some diamonds into dust. Last year's No. 1 series, Laverne & Shirley, is now ranked 28; the No. 3 show, Mork & Mindy, has gone to 20; and No. 4 series Happy Days has slipped to 15. Only one of its new series—Benson—has been a success, and it ranks 24 at that. Nevertheless, ABC anticipates a ratings boost from its Winter Olympics coverage next month and expects to win the season.

NBC's early-season euphoria has dissipated, but the company's ever-optimistic president, Fred Silverman, expects big things from several of the network's new series, Sanford and The Big Show in particular. NBC's affiliates are also encouraged by the success of such shows as Real People and The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo.

As We See It

☐ What makes a horse race? Mark Twain's Pudd'nhead Wilson said it was difference of opinion.

Sure enough. But if you saw "My Old Man" on CBS a few weeks ago, you were treated to a horse-race of a different hue. What made this one engrossing was exceptional talent, an excellent script and a general abundance of class. "My Old Man" was good storytelling, fine programming and first-rate entertainment—television at its best.

☐ It isn't often that we have the opportunity to turn this space into a mash note. Our love affair with television has more than its share of nagging, chiding, nose-tweaking and an occasional scream of outrage. But when TV comes through with quality programming, that should be acknowledged. As it happens, CBS had two other top-notch family dramas in December: "Aunt Mary" and "The Family Man."

"My Old Man" was based loosely on a short story by Ernest Hemingway. The "old man" in question is Frank Butler, a hard-drinking, hard-luck horse trainer made memorable by Warren Oates. Eileen Brennan, as Marie, is perfect as the heart-of-gold waitress who believes in Frank and mortgages her trailer to prove it. The script by Jerome Kass provided a bittersweet yet upbeat ending, and somehow managed to keep a sentimental story from growing maudlin.

☐ But the show is stolen, as usual, by the irresistible Kristy McNichol, the Old Man's loving, doubting, loyal, spunky daughter. She turns a climactic horse-race into a poignant triumph of spirit. The girl who was everybody's favorite kid (and a two-time Emmy winner) in Family and won critical acclaim for "The Summer of My German Soldier" is maturing into a gifted actress.

CBS deserves credit for "My Old Man" and its other fine dramas—TV-movies that prove you don't have to be sleazy, violent, jiggly or jerky to win a national audience. And a rave review.

"Time Out" will carry a new meaning on Jan. 11, when NBC presents the third version of the movie "Two-Minute Warning," which takes place at a football game. When NBC telecast the theatrical movie last February, it cut out about a half hour of the original footage, which was deemed too profane and violent. Then, for a half-million dollars, NBC had the producer, Universal, shoot about an hour's worth of new film and add new characters, a plot diversion and an identity for its sniper character. Now NBC has spent an additional $50,000 to shrink that three-hour TV version to two hours.

PBS, the Gulf Oil Company and the National Geographic Society are being sued by a producer who alleges they stole his idea for a show. Daniel Morgan claims the Geographic special "Superliners—Twilight of an Era," scheduled for PBS April 7, is based on his proposal for a program about transatlantic steamships and their fabled passengers. At stake, Morgan contends, is independent producers' access to public television. "If their exclusionary policy is going to change, it will have to come in court," he says.

Morgan maintains that he submitted his idea to PBS, the Geographic and Gulf (which underwrites the specials) as far back as 1975. In 1977 PBS's coordinator of public-affairs programming allegedly wrote him that PBS was "committed" to the show if Morgan could obtain underwriting and meet PBS's standards. The defendants' lawyer, Andrew Hughes, contends that "there is no property in doing a show on boats," noting that Morgan hasn't sued for copyright infringement. Hughes insists that the idea for the program came "long before anyone heard of Mr. Morgan." The case is now in a preliminary stage of fact-finding. It is considered doubtful that Morgan could obtain an injunction against the April showing. —Rick Cohen

The Screening Room

Previews of noteworthy series and specials by TV GUIDE programming editors. For movie choices, see "This Week's Movies," by Judith Crist, in this section.

There are comedy, drama and music outings on the schedule that are well worth your attention. But the week's most important program is a compelling examination of alleged Nazi war criminals—in the U.S.

SATURDAY. Wonder Woman shows off her musical talents on Lynda Carter's Special (8 CBS), an engaging songfest that also features the rock sound of Leo Sayer and the country strains of Kenny Rogers . . . The acclaimed drama series Visions (9 PBS) launches its fourth season with two short plays performed by all-black casts. Both are excellent; but the second of them is particularly distinguished by "Our Gang" alumnus Stymie Beard's touching portrayal of an impoverished old man wrongfully accused of stealing.

SUNDAY. A number of films—notably "The Stranger" (1946) and "The Boys from Brazil" (1978)—have found dramatic substance in the hunt for Nazi war criminals. Those works were fiction; "Escape from Justice: Nazi War Criminals in America," an ABC News Closeup (7 P.M.), deals with fact—how, following the Nuremberg trials, nearly 200 alleged war criminals found "a haven in the U.S." The report—which contains graphic concentration-camp scenes—concludes that some of these alleged offenders may have been "recruited and protected" by the U.S. Government, as it probes "why effective legal action against them is starting only now."

MONDAY. A silver-anniversary high-school reunion on Little House on the Prairie (8 NBC) only proves to Charles and Caroline that you can't go home again. The 25 years have greatly changed their friends—who are all very successful but not very happy . . . A vocal range that matches his prodigious size has made Luciano Pavarotti "opera's golden tenor." On Live from Lincoln Center (8:30 PBS; taped in some areas), Pavarotti is scheduled to perform arias by Donizetti, Leoncavallo, Verdi and Puccini in a concert with Zubin Mehta and the New York Philharmonic . . . An excellent script recommends an episode of M*A*S*H (9 CBS) that finds the earthy Colonel Potter and the aristocratic Major Winchester quarantined in the same tent. Their replacement, however, is a personable and competent surgeon (portrayed by Edward Herrmann) who seems just what the doctor ordered when the 4077th is suddenly deluged with casualties.

THURSDAY. Mr. Bickley's estrangement from his blind son makes for humor and pathos in a moving episode of Mork & Mindy (8 ABC). Credit a fine script, and strong performances by Tom Poston as Bickley and Tom Sullivan as his son for this notable change of pace.

FRIDAY. Cher and Elton John head the lineup of top-name performers on hand for the seventh annual American Music Awards (9 ABC). The ceremonies, telecast live from Hollywood (taped in some areas) salute the year's favorite pop/rock, soul and country songs and singers as judged by a public-opinion poll.

In some areas network shows may not be seen on the days and times indicated. Times are Eastern.

THE HOSTAGES AND THE RATINGS

"The Hostages and the Ratings" [As We See It, Dec. 22] listed some justified criticisms of the networks' sometimes circuslike coverage of the Iranian situation, but also included were some ill-founded complaints. The networks I've been watching have, for the most part, performed commendably in alerting viewers to the motives of the personalities and governments being examined. Your suggestion that a network should decline to air an interview because of the subject's refusals to answer certain questions or obvious attempts to divert attention shows a frustrating shallowness. Unfortunately, the lack of reason, uncooperativeness and transparency on the part of the players is at the heart of the Iran story. One must hope, for all our sakes, that most viewers have interpreted recent developments with greater sophistication than has TV GUIDE.

John Leenders
Ritzville, Wash.

Hooray for your criticism of the network coverage of the Iranian crisis. The networks ought to employ some of that wisdom they claim for their "seasoned" and "dedicated" newsmen to realize when to use discretion and where to draw the line. Are the networks truly reporting in the public's interest? More important, with Iran's present use of the media, have the networks stopped for a moment to think of the well-being of the hostages or their eventual release?

James D. West
Red Bank, N.J.

I want to tell you how much I approve of your editorial. I congratulate you on speaking out so clearly and so well.

Bertha Torczyner

Bravo! I just finished reading your editorial. You have eloquently informed the public of the dangers that a free press faces when reporting tyranny in the age of instant communication. It is not only sovereignty that is on trial here. Freedom of the press, while central to the existence of a pluralistic democracy, is not the depository of absolute truth and good, as some would have it. The performance of the networks in this instance places that freedom at its peril.

NEWS VIEWS

"Twinkly" David Brinkley may be right in his not-so-complimentary opinion of investigative reporting, saturation coverage of foreign news and editorializing on the tube ["Documentaries: 'Why Bother?' Exposés: 'Overrated'; Foreign News: 'Excessive'," Dec. 15], but I would hate to have missed "Warrendale" (sensitive treatment of disturbed youngsters), "Welfare" (everyone concerned with the system is frustrated), and "Harlan County, U.S.A." (realities of coal mining). The quality of documentaries makes all the difference.

TALL TALES

Your article in the Dec. 15 issue asks, "Can Pro Basketball Bounce Back?" Apparently millions of other sports fans have the same reaction as I to watching very tall men drop a ball into a basket that is only 10 feet off the floor. When the game was invented in 1891, a man of 6 feet was considered quite tall and sinking a basket required unusual skill. Nowadays, viewing 7-foot giants dunking a shot is strictly dullsville.

The floundering ratings pro basketball gets on television are due to its lack of defense and plenty of offense. The teams are playing beat the clock. My advice is to watch college basketball.

This Week's Movies By Judith Crist

Saturday, CBS	Outlaw Blues
Sunday, ABC	Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders II
Sunday, NBC	Doctor Franken
Monday, NBC	Power (Part I)
Tuesday, NBC	Power (Conclusion)
Wednesday, CBS	If Things Were Different
Friday, NBC	The Late Show

Homage to the Hammett-Chandler private-eye tradition, a violent melodrama, mental illness and two showbiz stories provide the week's entertainments.

1977's The Late Show, written and directed by Robert Benton, is the story of an aging detective out to solve his partner's murder. He's teamed up in the process and in spite of himself with a very kooky young woman. Art Carney is the detective and you're guaranteed the total pleasure of his company as an ailing, irascible man of heart and intelligence. Lily Tomlin's the kook, a would-be Nora in her "Nora & Nick" romanticizing of Dashiell Hammett's "Thin Man" couple. Benton has affectionately encompassed most of the plot clichés of the genre, but unfortunately the spoofery, the fine Tomlin shticks and our serious involvement with Carney are constantly interrupted by blood-soaked fatalities and violence. Present-day admirers of the genre would do well to take a blood count of the classics and see the superb restraint and power of suggestion that were used. It is a tribute to Carney that his performance emerges unspattered.

Written for TV by Ernest Tidyman, Power emphasizes mayhem rather than blood in its detailing of the rise and fall of a Hoffa-like trucking-union leader. In this brazen rehash of Norman Jewison's 1978 "F.I.S.T," Joe Don Baker, as Tommy Vanda, a Chicago warehouse worker, climbs to the top in the same fist-swinging way Sylvester Stallone, as Johnny Kovak, a Cleveland warehouse worker, did. Both start out in colorful '30s period settings and wind up before Congressional committees. Trouble is, Baker takes almost twice as long in this attenuated two-parter. The first half is action-packed, the second padded and muddled, with the old "power corrupts" bit beaten to death while Baker fiddles around with a classy lady lawyer and looks grim. Howard da Silva, Suzanne Lederer, Joe Santos and Red Buttons stand out in the predictable plotting; the flashback format provides little suspense.

Catatonia is the TV-movie ailment of the week via If Things Were Different, a sudser written by Bill Froehlich and Mark Lisson. Suzanne Pleshette is the housewife whose husband has been "a complete vegetable" for a year in a mental hospital, with obvious emotional and economic problems for her and the kids and, thank goodness, no surgery for the viewers. Should she play house with handsome, charming Tony Roberts? Not on your TV set, baby.

For lightweight diversion, 1977's Outlaw Blues has ex-con Peter Fonda on the lam from the law and making it as a country singer under the knowing aegis of Susan Saint James. There are chases, tongue-in-cheek crookery and pleasant people to amuse you.

The Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders II, a sequel to last year's TV-movie, was unavailable for preview, as was Doctor Franken, involving offbeat surgery.

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

STOP SMOKING IN 10 DAYS OR YOUR MONEY BACK

Minty tasting Deter helps do it in just 10 seconds a day!

You know the message carried on every package of cigarettes by heart: "WARNING: THE SURGEON GENERAL HAS DETERMINED THAT CIGARETTE SMOKING IS DANGEROUS TO YOUR HEALTH." Then why don't you . . . Why CAN'T YOU . . .STOP? (Now you can!)

You've heard those messages on TV from prestigious Associations, telling you the impressive evidence that smoking can cause cancer, heart disease, emphysema. And you say "I know I should stop — and I will — soon!" But you don't! (Now with Deter to help you can win your battle!)

Maybe you've even managed to stop — or at least cut down — and then slid right back into the habit again — when you were worried, depressed or tense and thought "I'll just have one and that's all." But soon your ashtray was full again. This time get Deter, and let it strengthen your willpower to quit for good!"

IF YOU SINCERELY WANT TO STOP SMOKING IN 10 DAYS — HERE'S YOUR CHANCE

Deter is a unique formula blended into a minty-tasting liquid. All you do is tap a few drops on the back of your tongue. Now you're "protected" against your habit for about 2 hours. As long as you refrain from smoking, Deter does absolutely nothing but refresh your mouth and breath! You can do anything you want, enjoy anything you eat or drink, drive a car, run a machine, make love, pilot a plane — because Deter is not a stimulant or depressant or nicotine substitute or medicine. But the instant your willpower fails you and you light up, Deter goes to work. We promise you unconditionally that your first puff will taste so terrible — so downright awful — that you won't want a second puff!

WHY DETER WORKS WHEN OTHER METHODS FAIL

Deter is such an effective deterrent to smoking because it reacts with the tars in cigarette smoke to make them taste terrible . . . instead of having to use your willpower to stop smoking — you'll find you don't have enough willpower to keep smoking. Psychologists call this effect a "powerful sensory signal" — an important aid to helping you break a habit that you've probably spent years acquiring. It changes the "turn-on" smoking may give you into a "turn-off" that's hard for your body to ignore.

WILL DETER WORK FOR YOU?

Not unless you sincerely want it to — because in a few hours the effect will disappear, and if you don't renew it by shaking a few more drops on your tongue, you'll be right back to square one again. But isn't it easier to use your willpower 5 or 6 times a day to take Deter than to fight 20 or 40 or 60 times a day against lighting up? And the best part is that in only 24 hours without a cigarette you've already started to lessen your physical need for nicotine — in only 7 days your psychological dependency on smoking has been interrupted — and in 3 days more you may discover your new habit of not smoking is now strong enough to "go it alone"!

YOU RISK NOTHING — TRY DETER AT OUR RISK

Experience has shown that Deter works for the overwhelming majority of people who really want to stop smoking — and we're so sure it will work for you that we'll hold your check uncashed for 30 days and return it to you if it doesn't! (We wouldn't make an offer like that in an expensive advertisement unless we knew in advance that you'll be delighted!)

So today order a 10-day supply of Deter for every smoker in the family — and receive free with every bottle our stop smoking booklet. But mail coupon now—we process orders within 48 hours, so the sooner your order is received, the sooner you can make your promise to yourself to stop smoking come true!

APPROVED
Smoke Watchers International

Deter has been tested and approved by Smoke Watchers International as an effective aid in breaking the smoking habit.

NEW, ORIGINAL DRAMAS FOR TV

Return: This acclaimed anthology series opens a fourth season with two short plays about aspects of the black experience in America.

In the first, "Shoes," a pair of older and wiser men try to persuade three materialistic teen-agers to save their summer paychecks for something worthwhile, rather than blow the money on fancy clothes and alligator shoes. Written by Ted Shine. Ronald: Corkey Ford. Wisely: Bill Cobbs. Mack: Bill Walker. Marshall: Gary Veney. Travis: John-Anthony Bailey.

"String," by Alice Childress, tells the story of an honest old man (portrayed by Stymie Beard) whose shabby appearance and peculiar habits automatically make him the prime suspect when a wallet disappears at a community picnic. Maydelle: Marilyn Coleman. Katy: Kim Fields. Mrs. Rodgers: Minnie S. Lindsey. Mrs. Beverly: Dorothy Meyer. L.V. Craig: Theodore Wilson. (90 min.)

Doctors Prove You Can Help Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation.

Gives prompt temporary relief from hemorrhoidal pain and itch in many cases.

There's a famous medication so effective that in many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief for hours from pain and burning itch of hemorrhoidal tissues. It also actually helps shrink the painful swelling of these tissues due to inflammation.

This doctor-tested medication is Preparation H®. There's no other formula like Preparation H. Ointment and suppositories.

Use only as directed.

In Whitehall, N.Y., students protest outside the home of an alleged SS officer.

Special: This report deals with "allegations that there are more than 200 Nazi war criminals now living in America." Furthermore, according to producer Richard Gerdau, some of them may have been recruited, protected and even employed by the United States Government.

A special unit of the Justice Department has taken legal action against 16 alleged Nazi war criminals. One of the cases in litigation examined in this hour involves a Michigan archbishop accused of participating in a pogrom against Rumanian Jews in the early 1940s that resulted in mass murder.

But for too many years, according to this program (which is being edited at press time), the majority of these suspected offenders avoided deportation because of government indifference or negligence—or through the efforts of influential friends or agencies that needed their brainpower.

Nazi-hunter Simon Wiesenthal, author Elie Wiesel and Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman (D-N.Y.) are among those interviewed.

Tim O'Brien and Michael Connor are the reporters. (60 min.)

Land of the free.
Home of the brave.
A haven for over 200 alleged Nazi war criminals.

Today in America, over 200 alleged Nazi war criminals are walking around free. And have been for over three decades. Together, they are believed responsible for the deaths of 2 million people.

Why were they allowed in? How have they avoided prosecution? And why were many recruited, protected and employed by our government? Watch ABC News Closeup tonight to find out more about this unique group of immigrants who have found refuge on our shores.

POWER, PART 1

Joe Don Baker stars in this 1980 TV-movie as Tommy Vanda, a hard-nosed workingman who rises to trade-union prominence during the Depression.

Tommy first makes a name for himself by organizing a wildcat rail strike to protest unfair working conditions. Soon he is recruited by a union local and assigned to solicit new membership.

But management sees the labor movement as a threat to profits, and tries to maintain its open shops with strong-arm tactics. Vanda elects to fight fire with fire, seeking muscle from organized crime—a move that will have a decided effect on his future.

Written by Oscar winner Ernest Tidyman ("The French Connection"), the film concludes at this time tomorrow.

Rose: Karen Black. Tony: David Groh. Solly: Red Buttons. Hillman: Victor Jory. Sham: William Lucking. Jack: Brian Kerwin. Catherine: Suzanne Lederer. Buck: Tom Atkins. Frelinghuysen: Ralph Bellamy. Konigsburg: Joe Santos. Mother Vanda: Jo Van Fleet. Eisenstadt: Howard da Silva. (2 hrs.)

ART COLLEGE EARS OLDER, YEARS WISER, 12,100 RICHER.

A lot of people who start college right after high school discover they're not ready for it.

That's a good reason to think about serving three years in the Army first. In the Army, you mature fast. You're given responsibility.

And you learn to appreciate the value of an education.

And now, you can also get extra benefits to help pay for your education.

If you join the Veterans' Educational Assistance Program (VEAP), the money you save for school is matched two-for-one by the government (see table). Then, if you qualify, up to $4,000 extra is added to that.

That's why, in just three years in the Army, you could save as much as $12,100 for college.

HOW VEAP WORKS

	Per Mo.	3 Yrs.	4 Yrs.
You save:	$75	$2700	$2700
Gov't adds 2-for-1:	$150	$5400	$5400
Total:	$225	$8100	$8100
Education Bonus:		$4000	$6000
Total Benefits:		$12,100	$14,100*

So you won't just be three years older when you start college. You'll also be three years wiser. And $12,100 richer.

Serve your country as you serve yourself. Call the toll-free number below. Better yet, look in the Yellow Pages under "Recruiting."

THE OFFICIAL

State Birds and Flowers

MINIATURE PORCELAIN PLATE COLLECTION

PLATE SHOWN APPROXIMATELY ACTUAL SIZE.

A limited edition collection of fine bone china plates—decorated in 24kt gold—bearing original and exclusive works of art that capture all the beauty of America's best-loved birds and flowers.

To beautify your home today . . . to be treasured by your family in years to come . . .

Hardwood display shelf included.

For the first time, the official birds and flowers of all fifty of our sovereign States will be portrayed in a collection of miniature porcelain plates. Fine collector's plates designed to bring a touch of freshness and beauty to any room in your home.

Original works by a gifted artist. Each plate combines the beautiful bird and flower of a different State in a colorful and harmonious tableau. Fifty such combinations in all—in original works created exclusively for this collection by the talented painter Anthony Young.

As an added touch of elegance, the rim of each plate is encircled with a decorative border of pure 24 karat gold. And this handsome design provides the perfect setting for these colorful works of art.

Superbly detailed porcelain miniatures. In every sense, this collection is a major achievement of artistry and craftsmanship. Masterpieces in miniature that must be seen—and handled—to be fully appreciated.

Hold any of these plates in your hand. Examine it closely. You'll be amazed at its intricacy and fine detail. And you'll marvel at the masterful way in which the artist has brought bird and flower together in an enchanting and highly original design.

The result: A collection of fine art in miniature that will be admired and enjoyed by your entire family.

A most attractive price. As a subscriber, you will receive your plates at the convenient rate of one each month, at just $14.50 for each plate. You'll also receive—at no additional charge—a custom-designed hardwood wall shelf to hold and display all fifty plates.

Applications are being accepted from now until January 31, 1980. After that date, the subscription rolls will close permanently. To acquire the collection, mail the application below to Franklin Porcelain, Franklin Center, Pennsylvania, by January 31st.

CAN YOU PICK WHICH MAN HAS THE HAIR HE WAS BORN WITH?

Of course you can't.
Because Dk hair is so nearly perfect. With natural styling, color, and manageability, even after a hectic day, close-up examination on an elevator won't detect your secret. Proving that the guy in plaid has nothing on you.

You fooled me! Tell me more about Dk hair! TG1-12

Art Carney and Lily Tomlin

THE LATE SHOW

Art Carney and Lily Tomlin team up in a homage to private-eye flicks.

A kidnaped cat, a stolen stamp collection, a blackmailed wife and assorted corpses confront aging, ulcer-ridden sleuth Ira Wells (Carney), when he sets out to solve the murder of his ex-partner in Los Angeles.

For starters, there's that cat, the purloined pet of a small-time fence named Margo Sperling (Tomlin), who, as she leads Ira on a twisting trail of clues, envisions the two of them as a modern-day Nick and Nora Charles. Not so Ira, who, in gumshoe tradition, prefers to work alone.

Still, it's their chemistry—Carney's good-natured gruffness and Tomlin's kooky zeal—that gives this 1977 film its charm, while its complicated plot and snappy dialogue are, well, straight out of "The Late Show."

Written and directed by Robert Benton ("Kramer vs. Kramer"). Charlie: Bill Macy. Ron: Eugene Roche. Laura: Joanna Cassidy. Lamar: John Considine. Mrs. Schmidt: Ruth Nelson. Sergeant: John Davey. Harry: Howard Duff. (2 hrs.)

Larry Wilcox is looking beyond his starring role on 'CHiPs' toward work that offers him more freedom

By Bill Davidson

On a recent Tuesday, Larry Wilcox reported for work on his series, CHiPs—arriving early in the morning at the as-yet-unopened stretch of the Paxton Freeway north of Los Angeles, which the show leases as a sort of permanent set for its endless succession of car and motorcycle chases.

Inasmuch as the 31-year-old, boyish-faced Wilcox is the star (along with Erik Estrada) of one of NBC's pathetic handful of successful series, you'd think his day would be crammed full of activity and adulation.

On the contrary, the following is the exact schedule of what transpired for him during that particular nine hours of work:

At 10:30 A.M., Wilcox did a scene in which he had to utter the single line, "May I see your driver's license, please?"

He did not appear before the cameras again until 6:31 P.M., when he and Estrada were filmed in close-up on their motorcycles, reenacting parts of chases that already had been performing ad infinitum by the many stuntmen who impersonate the stars in the action sequences.

At 7:02 P.M., Wilcox did his second speaking scene of the day, which consisted of the lines, "You've got traffic backed up to the freeway. What's this all about?"

Work ended at 7:30

P.M. Wilcox had filled in the rest of the day by playing his guitar, preparing for a tax audit, doing 150 push-ups, and reading a script he might possibly acquire for his own production company, Flying Diamond Enterprises.

An extremely bright and pragmatic young man, Wilcox loyally says, "I like CHiPs," then adds, "but I don't exactly get to use all my acting muscles in the show." It is evident from my continuing conversations with him that his interests are vectored elsewhere. Examples:

On directing: "A good director is like a painter filling in the frame of a picture. Directing is what gives me the most peace of mind—and everyone needs peace of mind in order to survive. Last season, I directed a CHiPs segment, 'Ride the Whirlwind,' which drew a 40 share of audience. It was much more fascinating being director Wilcox, planning eight scenes ahead, than being actor Wilcox."

On war: "It's crazy. I was a combat marine in Vietnam and it bothered me that our values suddenly were turned upside down. Killing no longer was a sin; society didn't say no to it. So a lot of people got rid of their aggressions by destroying human beings. Some of them played war and enjoyed war. It's sickness!"

On dentistry: "I was a pre-dent student in college for one simple reason: I always had been poor, and being a dentist meant being rich. With my manual dexterity, I would have been the worst dentist in the world."

On his on-screen persona: "With my face, I'm resigned to always being cast as the all-American boy. But I never fail to try to make the all-American boy a little more interesting. For example, in the TV-movie 'The Last Ride of the Dalton Gang' I played my sweet-faced outlaw with a little neurotic wheeze whenever I was under pressure."

On his rambunctious costar in CHiPs, Erik Estrada: "Erik and I come from totally different backgrounds and we think totally differently. We have nothing in common, but we have established a rapport because we realize we must complement one another. Like Laverne and Shirley."

On his ultimate future: "It lies with my own production company, Flying Diamond. I bought $50,000-worth of video equipment and talked Jay Michelis of NBC into letting me produce a few of the network's on-air promotional blurbs for CHiPs. I got a deal to make 150 of them for the 1979-80 season. Now I'm looking for my own film properties and series ideas."

On movies and TV in general: "It's a little bit scary that the public is so conditioned by what they see on the screen that the Godfather becomes a sympathetic character."

As these snippets indicate, Larry Wilcox is an extraordinary and complicated young man—quite different from the placidly unflappable Jon Baker character he plays in CHiPs. This is not surprising when you consider the tough and brutal early years that he somehow managed to survive.

Born in San Diego in the post-World War II recession, Larry was an infant when his mother divorced his bartender father and packed him and her other three children off to Rawlins, Wyo., site of her family's ancestral Flying Diamond Ranch (now no longer in his family). Larry says, "I grew up riding and roping and doing all the macho things you're supposed to do in such a community—and I shocked a lot of people by singing in the school chorus. Decidedly non-macho."

At 18, Larry gravitated to Los Angeles, following the lead of a friend with whom he had played the electric organ in a rock band. There was no work for electric organists in Hollywood. Larry toiled as a newspaper deliverer, a gas-pump jockey, a telephone-cable splicer, while studying the piano at the Beverly Hills Music Academy with Lois Auer. Auer, noting the youth's intelligence and Golden Boy looks, → switched him to acting lessons. She also got him an agent who began to find him work in TV commercials specializing in Golden Boy types.

But then came the brutal interruptions. First, his 23-year-old sister, Sharon Kay, was murdered by her estranged husband. Larry had to return to comfort his mother in Rawlins, where the only work he could find was as a railroad telegrapher, living in lonely shacks in the wilds, handing routing instructions to passing train crews.

Next, in 1967, came his involvement in the ongoing Vietnam War. "To avoid the draft," he told me, "I enlisted in the Marine Corps Reserve, but I ended up in the artillery in Con Thien, the hellhole of Vietnam. For 13 miserable months, I was part of a six-man Fire Directions Control and Survey team. They'd drop us into Vietcong territory by helicopter and we'd survey the terrain for a battery of artillery that was to follow us into the area. Then we'd be flown out—those of us, anyway, who hadn't been blown up by VC mines and booby traps."

Upon his discharge from the Marines in May 1970, Wilcox immediately returned to Los Angeles. He got a construction job, resumed his acting lessons, took pre-dentistry classes at California State University, Northridge. Between classes, however, he began to make considerable money doing commercials again—which led to his working for two years as a regular in the syndicated Lassie series.

It was then that he began to develop his interest in directing and producing. He'd show up on the Lassie set with an 8-mm movie camera and emulate and study every move the show's directors made. Noting this, Lassie's proprietor, Jack Wrather, offered Wilcox the choice of directing TV commercials or allowing Wrather to help him if he wanted to go to dental school at the University of Texas or USC.

Faced with this remarkable dual offer, young Wilcox opted for neither. "Basically, I'm a businessman," he says, "and I was beginning to make too much money at acting to give it up just then. Actually, I wasn't too smart. If I had accepted Wrather's Option No. 1, I could have been my own man as a director a long time ago."

So the acting continued. There were three Walt Disney movies, parts in series like Hawaii Five-O and The Streets of San Francisco, extremely profitable commercials for Union Oil, Old Spice, etc. The money was so good, in fact, that he and his wife Judy (from whom he is now divorced) lived comfortably on a good-sized ranch in Thousand Oaks, Cal., with their children, Derek, now 10, and Heidi, 5—plus 11 valuable horses, including four Arabians. "I was in sort of a pleasant torpor," says Wilcox, "having more fun competing in weekend rodeos than in acting."

The torpor dissipated in 1975 when Wilcox suffered the one great, bitter disappointment of his career. More than anything, he wanted to play the part of Tom Jordache in the first big Universal-ABC miniseries, Rich Man, Poor Man. But it went to Nick Nolte—and Wilcox took the CHiPs role "sort of on the rebound from my despair at not getting to play Tom Jordache."

To everyone's amazement, CHiPs, after a slow start, avoided quick annihilation by changing its emphasis from comedy to action after the first 10 shows. Then—abetted by all the motorcycle and auto chases—it worked its way up to the top 25 in the Nielsens, with a large, appreciative, mostly teen audience. It is one of the few recent NBC series to survive into a third season. The results have been vastly encouraging for Wilcox and his plans for himself and his production company.

"If a show about traffic cops can work . . ." he begins.

But then his inbred loyalty prevents him from finishing the sentence. END

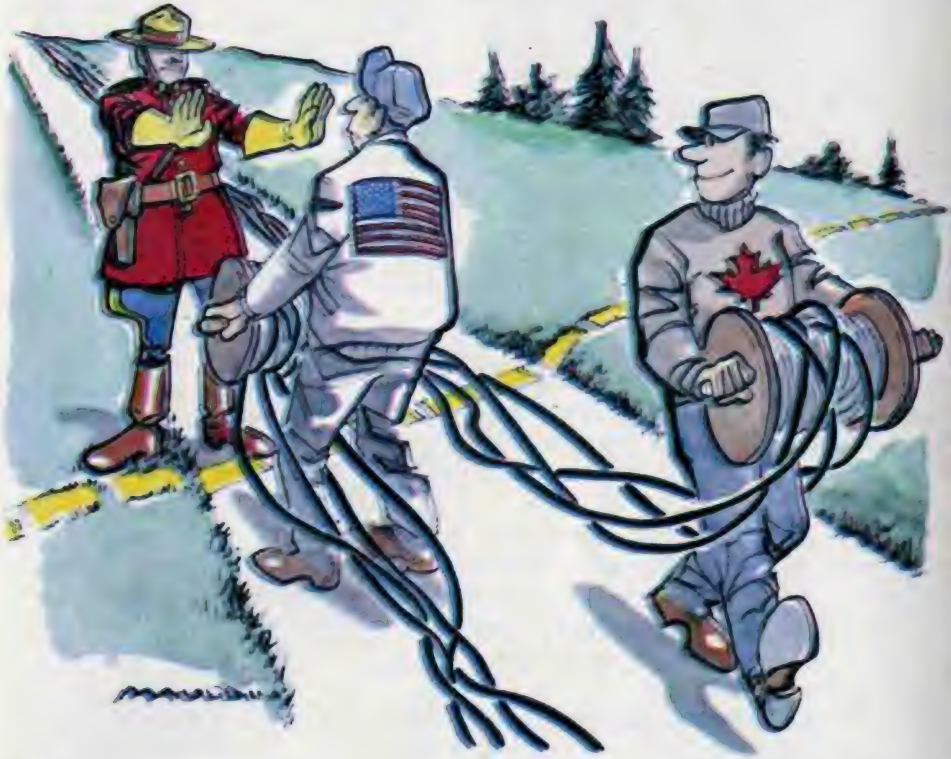
For cable TV, it's a one-way border



Canadian companies are teaming up with local citizens to win lucrative U.S. franchises—while American competitors are unwelcome in Canada

By Stephen Banker

Northeast Philadelphia could be a neighborhood built from a cable-television executive's fantasies: mile upon mile of row houses filled with solidly middle-class folks who can afford modest monthly cable-TV fees. Its population of almost half a million includes 140,000 television households. When the city administration invited bids on cable franchises last summer, eight companies submitted applications for this plum—the largest number to bid for any of the city's four cable areas.

The competition in Northeast Philadelphia reflects a nationwide scramble to offer Americans cable television. Only one in five households has cable service now—compared, for example, with half the households in Canada, whose cable operators are becoming increasingly active in the United States. →

This, at a time when American companies are not allowed to compete equally with Canadian firms for cable franchises in Canada.

In the competition for a franchise to serve the northeast section of Philadelphia can be seen many of the dangers of the unseemly rush—with Canadians leading the pack—to offer all Americans the kind of television service whose time seems finally to have come.

Among the eight applicants seeking to provide cable service to Philadelphia's "Area 4" is a novel coalition of two unlikely partners: Maclean-Hunter Cable TV, Ltd. of Toronto, Canada, and the University of Pennsylvania. At this writing, the city has not announced who will provide cable TV to Philadelphians, but win or lose, this unusual alignment illuminates the new forces in the cable scramble that are getting stronger day by day.

For a variety of political, economic and geographical reasons, Canadian cable-TV companies like Maclean-Hunter have recently become formidable competitors in this country. Today, Canadian investment in American cable systems approaches a quarter of a billion dollars. Canadian interests control franchises in a number of U.S. population centers, including Minneapolis and Atlanta, along with medium-sized towns like Fresno, Cal., Syracuse, N.Y. and Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Maclean-Hunter already owns 41 franchises in northern New Jersey and nine in the suburbs of Detroit, available to a total of half a million households.

Meanwhile, the Canadian government has passed legislation designed to lessen what Canadian leaders term "American dominance" of the Canadian economy and culture. Foreign ownership of Canadian cable systems is limited to 20 per cent. Canadian firms are denied the normal tax break on advertising money paid to U.S.-owned media. TV stations and periodicals are legally bound to include a rigid percentage of Canadian-originated material, although Canadians overwhelmingly prefer American shows and magazines. The government officially hinders pay-TV, largely because so many of the first-run movies shown on such systems come from outside Canada.

But Canadian operators were painfully aware that pay television accounted for the highest cable profits on the American side of the border: they knew there was what one Maclean-Hunter executive described as "a healthier investment atmosphere" in the United States. The result has been a politically created windfall for Canadian companies, which are protected from American competition in their own country, while U.S. pickings are ripe on the bough.

Other Canadians point out that most programs distributed in both countries originate in the United States—situation comedies, game shows, Hollywood specials, etc. They consider it indecorous for Americans to talk about economic incursion when a majority of Canadian big business is still under the thumb of U.S. investors. Since Canadians got an early jump in the cable industry, they reason, it makes as much sense to export their expertise as it did for Ford and GM years ago to establish Canadian branches.

Maclean-Hunter believed itself to be taking the high road to Philadelphia gold when it made its approach to the University of Pennsylvania. In the past, franchise maneuvering has brought about many unsavory alliances. There have been bribes, dodges and various forms of fraud resulting in not a few jail terms.

But this meeting had the flavor of a "gentlemen's agreement." An executive of a company owned by Maclean-Hunter, Israel Switzer, carried the message to Robert Lewis Shayon, a former television critic for the Saturday Review who now teaches at the Annenberg →

School of Communications at the University of Pennsylvania. Shayon introduced his university colleagues to Switzer's business colleagues, and voilà, "They made us," says Jon Strauss, Penn's vice president for financial affairs, "an offer we couldn't refuse."

What was this attractive offer? On inspection, it does prove rather hard to turn down. The coalition of Maclean-Hunter and the University of Pennsylvania would offer the residents of Northeast Philadelphia 35 bright and clear channels, including all the commercial and noncommercial stations from the area, plus a few from New York. There would be superstations, religious stations, public-access stations and one channel run by the university. Subscribers would pay $8.50 a month, with the option of adding another $18 for two kinds of pay-TV.

The agreement between the two institutions provides that Maclean-Hunter pays about $150,000 for putting the application together—the fees for lawyers and engineers, for printing and typing, along with the costs of making presentations to the city administration and to northeast civic groups and employing a consultant to serve as liaison with the university.

If the application is successful, $2 million would be required as initial investment capital. Of this, Maclean-Hunter puts up $1.6 million and lends Penn the remaining $400,000, thereby assigning 20 per cent of the company to the university. The loan is to be repaid through operating revenue if it starts coming in—for if the venture proves a failure, the loan is entirely forgiven. An additional sum up to $18 million is to be borrowed, with Maclean-Hunter guaranteeing the whole amount. And if, the agreement carefully notes, Penn's tax-free status is jeopardized by this brush with commerce, the university may sell its shares—at a profit, of course—to Maclean-Hunter.

Beyond this, the university acquires one cable channel of its own—which it may use for instructing communications students, giving extension courses (and thereby charging tuition of the viewers who wish to enroll), or for any other purpose it sees fit. (Maclean-Hunter executives assert, by the way, that they would have offered the university this channel even if there were no partnership.) Maclean-Hunter, upon award of the franchise, agrees to donate to the university some $300,000 worth of studio equipment, including color cameras and editing consoles. This equipment is to remain in the possession of the university in any event and will be in place some two years before the cable franchise is in operation.

As its share of the profits, the university can expect to receive about a quarter of a million dollars per year. The university's financial risk from start to finish is zero. It agrees only to provide an office and a telephone extension.

And what, the skeptical reader may wonder, did the University of Pennsylvania offer for such favorable terms? The answer harks back to the peculiar evolution of cable television in the United States. Because the choice of franchise applicants is up to the municipality, it is crucial for outside operators to establish local bona fides. This practice as it has developed is referred to in the trade as "Rent-a-Civic-Leader."

Sometimes the custom has taken bizarre forms. The Portland Oregonian estimates that would-be franchise holders spread more than a million dollars in consultants' fees among 50 of the city's most influential political and business leaders. An Alexandria, Va., applicant, though not a resident of that city, bought his burial plot there. In Atlanta, a Canadian firm with the imaginative name of Cable Atlanta joined forces with some high-powered local businessmen and won the franchise—as did their colleagues of Canadian →

Cablesystems, Ltd. who promised partial local ownership to the city of Syracuse, N.Y. In Richmond, Va., according to the trade journal Cablevision, an outside company established an advisory board of the campaign managers of black city-council members, officers of a black political organization and black business and religious leaders.

Critics of Rent-a-Civic-Leader maintain that once the franchises are awarded, the outside companies go about running the business, and the local partners and advisers are forgotten except on payday.

So it was not surprising that Maclean-Hunter, one of the largest cable operators in North America, should seek out a local partner when it decided to try for Philadelphia's northeast. The local angle made all the more sense in light of the fact that one formidable competitor is Comcast, which happens to have headquarters in a Philadelphia suburb.

The surprise lay in the choice. "This is the first union," said Robert Lewis Shayon, the marriage broker, "in a franchise bid between a major American university and a major [cable] operator."

The dean of the Annenberg School of Communications, George Gerbner, is already entertaining doubts about the match. He admits to what he calls "serious doubts as to whether this is the proper role for a university. The partnership of a university and a cable company to jointly apply for a franchise is an imbalanced proposition. Their missions are too different."

Dean Gerbner implies that television broadcasting in the United States has not usually been associated with scholastic values. "Our business," Shayon had asserted, "is the communication of knowledge and its expansion through research." It follows, of course, that broadcasting also communicates knowledge. But cable systems lend themselves to all kinds of ticklish political situations that a university might find hard to handle. Is Penn, which has seen the FCC license of its campus radio station withdrawn, at least partly because of obscenity it broadcast, now prepared for cable's censor-free status?

The application was made in a special atmosphere of Philadelphia politics. With a mayoral election scheduled for Nov. 6 (former Democratic representative William Green won the mayoral contest), outgoing Mayor Frank Rizzo's administration was supposed to make its cable-franchise recommendations to the city council on Oct. 15. Predictably, there was a deafening silence around that date, and repeated calls to city hall by this reporter and others were not returned. It appeared that the lame-duck Rizzo government would leave the whole matter to the incoming office-holders, who took over on Jan. 7.

So all the applicants for the cable franchise for Philadelphia's northeast are still waiting in suspense to see who will receive what Shayon calls "a license to mint money."

So far, American companies believing they face unfair competition from Canada have received no help from their own Government. The Federal Communications Commission has chosen to leave the way open to foreign cable systems, while maintaining what it calls a "watchful" attitude. But last November an American cable company, Midwest Cable, Inc. filed a petition with the FCC asking that foreign ownership of any American cable-TV system be limited to 25 per cent. While no FCC decision is expected for some months, during which time Canadian companies could win still more franchises, the petition at least offers some hope to those who believe that cable television in this country might be better served if American and Canadian cable companies were able to compete on an equal footing. Here and in Canada. END

JANE HALL REPORTS:

The rough-and-tumble Dukes of Hazzard have sired an heir. Enos, the character played by SONNY SCHROYER, will spin off into a CBS series called, naturally, Enos. It begins production soon and may premiere as early as this spring . . . Independent documentary filmmakers ALAN and SUSAN RAYMOND have signed an agreement to co-produce a documentary with ABC News. The program, tentatively scheduled for a spring air date, will focus on the British army in Northern Ireland. The Raymonds ("The Police Tapes," "Bad Boys") were among the first independents to break the network-news barrier against documentaries by outside filmmakers . . . JAMES EARL JONES, VERONICA CARTWRIGHT, BRAD DOURIF and NED BEATTY have been cast in "The Mad Messiah," a CBS-TV movie about the REV. JIM JONES.

CHUCK MANGIONE has composed a theme--called "Give It All You Got"--to be played during the ABC coverage of the 1980 Winter Olympics. Mangione told us, "The spirit of the Olympics is that, whatever your capacity, you try to do that well and go beyond it." Mangione's joyful compositions ("Land of Make-Believe," "Children of Sanchez") were used in ABC's coverage of the 1976 Olympics and the Special Olympics for retarded children. The composer-flügelhorn player is no stranger to sports. "When I was a little kid in Rochester, N.Y., I did nothing but baseball and music. Now my band and I play baseball when we're on tour. Music and sports are alike: when you're playing or shagging fly balls, something happens that takes you out of yourself."

Muzak and other sound environments are the subject of the first episode of Media Probes, a new PBS series that begins this week with one special and will be back a year from now with another seven episodes. Producers KIT LAYBOURNE and MICHAEL LEMLE told us, "We want to make people aware of their media environment. We're not drawing conclusions--we're just saying, 'If you're out in water, you might want to know how to swim'." Among the upcoming topics are photography and TV newscasts.

A sequel to "The Stepford Wives," the theatrical film based on the IRA LEVIN thriller, will be produced as a CBS TV-movie by EDGAR SCHERICK . . . A film portrait of tenor LUCIANO PAVAROTTI will be seen on PBS in March during the network's fund-raising "Festival '80."

While the Government has been spending and meddling us into our present laughable condition—stagflation or whatever they're calling it now—a peppery little man named Milton Friedman has been saying it's all wrong. Friedman, the last of the unrepentant free-market economists, has stood his lonely ground for unrestrained capitalism and hands-off Government policy. Meanwhile, everyone else—from corporation fatcats to stoop laborers—has been doing the opposite: demanding Government protection, subsidy and general tinkering in the marketplace.

Dr. Friedman has a Nobel Prize and liberal economists profess to respect him while they smile at his notions as quaint, simplistic and recidivist. It may be a sign of the times that Friedman, all of a sudden, has a 10-week series on PBS, Free to Choose. With prices going crazy and everyone getting poorer at a breathtaking rate, it begins to appear that what we've been doing isn't working so well. Maybe Milton Friedman has had something all along.

Friedman—bald, spectacled and diminutive—is not what you'd call a spellbinding television personality. But in the premiere of his series he stood right up like a banty rooster and stated his credo without apology: "Freedom can't exist without economic freedom." The more the marketplace is let alone, the more prosperous is the Nation and the more free the individual. Furthermore, he told us, "The only alternative to the free market is force—some people telling other people what to do." That's just what we have now, he implied—Government blundering around in the system, telling everyone what to do and creating a mess.

For his idea of an economy that works right, Friedman took us to Hong Kong. That British crown colony is a teeming anthill of trade whose government, despairing of controlling the crazy-quilt complexities of international wheeling and dealing, has simply stood back and let 'er rip. There are no tariffs, subsidies, regulations. The result is a booming economy that responds instantly to consumer demand, where there's no waste and no welfare.

Friedman's lectures are followed by discussions, in which guests often bristle at the good doctor's unreconstructed capitalism. Russell Peterson, former governor of Delaware, pointed out that Government restraints on the market help prevent abuses like pollution. Friedman popped back, "Air and water are cleanest in the advanced countries."

There are interesting gaps in Dr. Friedman's theories. Maybe he wants to live in a world without child labor laws and unemployment compensation, but I'm not sure I do. And he doesn't point out that his Hong Kong workers, plugging away at their 12-hour days, are flat out of luck if they get sick. And his hands-off theories don't seem to apply to the Federal Reserve, which he wants to bite the bullet of recession and keep biting until it hurts.

Still, this doughty scholar and his ideas are worth a listen. Who knows, they might even work. END
